Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 20 W. H. Netherton, aged 55, today fell four stories in the tobacco warehouse of W. A. Jones & Co into the cellar.

He broke his neck and almost every bone in his body, and death was an instant result.

Mr. Netherton reached out to catch the elevator rope and missed, falling headlong into the pit. He was a widower with one daughter, Mrs. Pasover with one daughter, Mrs. Jas. Russell, of Frankfort.

In the next General Assembly there will be an absence of ministers of the gospel. The Democrats nominated a number, but practically all of them were defeated at the polls. Out of 138 members, the occupations of considerably over 100 are given. In the coming Assembly there will be thirty-nine farmers, thirty-nine lawyers, seven physicians, four school teachers, three druggists, three bankers, six merchants, two insurance agents, one preacher of the gospel, one dentist, one real estate agent, two livermen, one stock trader, one carpenter, one tobaccoist, one grocer, one miner, one lumberman, one saloon keeper, one wire-keeper, one traveling agent, two editors, one manufacturer, two clerks, one painter, one railroad man and one contractor. In the Legislature will be a good many representatives of the American Society of Equity. It would not be surprising if bills unfriendly to the interests of the American Tobacco Company would be introduced.

Lexington, Ky., Dec. 21.—Probably the only case in the legal history of Kentucky in which a woman acted as judge was decided in this city today. George Denny and J. Franklin Wallace were opposing counsel in the case of Mary L. Scott versus Penn Byron, and the attorneys had attempted to reach a settlement out of court. In the course of the negotiations, however, they arrived at a point over which neither would make concessions, and they agreed to submit the matter to Magistrate Abner Oldham.

As it was after office hours the attorneys proceeded to the Magistrate's residence, but were chagrined when they arrived there to find that the Magistrate was not at home. His wife was, however, and as the attorneys were anxious to bring the case to a conclusion they decided to submit the question to Mrs. Oldham. The latter consented to act, and each of the lawyers presented his side of the case. When they had concluded their statements Mrs. Oldham quietly gave a decision which settled the question at issue, and then, incontinently dismissed court and hastened out to the kitchen from which she had detected signs that the biscuits for supper were burning.

OPITUARY.

Death has entered the home of J. W. and Dora Woods, of Vessie, and claimed as its victim, the three year old, beloved boy, Virgil, was called home Nov. 13—or after an illness of only a few days. All that could be done by physicians and loving hands of friends was done. So this makes us remember that there is One stronger than we, and God, in His Allwise Providence, reached out His loving hand and plucked the tender bud from their care, and transplanted it as a star to shine on and beckon homeward father, mother, brother and sisters. If we could only hear the voice of that sweet little angel, we would hear—"weep not for me for I am looking for you to enter the pearly gate."

So dear friends we sympathize with you in losing from sight your heart's treasure, but know that he is not dead but sleepeth. Ere death could blight or sorrow fade Death came with friendly care; The opening bud to Heaven conveyed And bade it blossom there.
